Night Lights in the Hospital.

Ever walk through the baby ward in a hospital at midnight? Rows of little, softly breathing bundles, and at almost every step you take somewhere in the ward a plaintive cry. At the door the night nurse is sitting, and by her side stands the night light, benevolently watching all the babies.

How many beginnings of great men has that unobtrusive night light seen? How many criminals, how many teachers, preachers, crooks and business men? The night light and the nurse are helping each one to a career of fame or shame. Yet none of us would bid the nurse or night light stop their growing up. "It takes all kinds to make a world," we say in a whisper.

Then take a walk through the baby ward in daylight. The babies are smiling, and their hands are clutching for something that is not there. We cannot but think that this and that softly breathing bundle will come to a good and happy destiny, and because we are human beings, and they are our kind, we keep on hoping.—Haverhill Gazette.

Soon Will Be Short.

There's a lady up in front who wants to buy an oriental vase," said the curio dealer's assistant.

"Does she look as if she had money?"

"Yes, but she doesn't look as if she had it long."

"Good. I'll wait on her myself."

It is suggested that on Saturday evenings, when Main street is so filled with cars, autoists use only dimmed lights or side lights in passing up and down that part of Main street between Prospect street and Granite street. This will save much confusion and be helpful to all auto drivers.

The ladies' union of the Presbyterian church will meet at the church on Wednesday, Aug. 25, at 2 p. m. Come prepared to work and stay for supper. If any of the ladies of the congregation are willing to help us, we will be very pleased to have them. Telephone 644-W for information.

Theron G. Williams of Williamstown passed through Barre this morning with his Ford and a pig. Both Williams and the pig appeared to be enjoying the ride, the latter occupying his own private compartment, a packing box, boarded up and strapped to the running board of the car. Doubtless, now that Mr. Williams has instituted this practice, several other farmers of the vicinity will convert their "Lizies" into pig conveyers.

As a testimonial for long and faithful service as financial secretary of Clan Gordon, No. 12, O. S. C., a committee recently appointed, including the chief and secretary, mailed this week to Robert Gordon, now of Lynn, Mass., a package containing $100 in gold. Accompanying the money was a letter of explanation bearing greetings from the order. Mr. Gordon resigned the office Jan. 7, 1920, after having held it from Jan. 10, 1909.

The twenty delegates from Rutland post, American Legion, to the state convention in Barre on Aug. 30 and 31 have been instructed to work during the convention to secure the 1921 convention for Rutland, it being the desire to have the Legion assemble there at the same time as the formal opening of the new state armory. In addition to the twenty delegates from Rutland post, there will be a representation of the Ladies' Auxiliary in Barre during the days of the convention on Aug. 30 and 31.

Mrs. Margaret McAdam and daughter, Miss Jessie McAdam, of 3 Mt. Vernon place leave to-morrow morning for Boston, where the latter will enter the Elliott hospital to undergo an operation. At the recent clinic at the City Hospital, Dr. Frank Ober of Boston recommended an operation as a means of bringing into use again the legs of Miss McAdam, which for a dozen years have been paralyzed. "White attending school and almost at the age of six, she suffered paralysis of the arms, hands and legs and at the time doctors were unable to diagnose the case or prescribe treatment that would bring results. In latter years the disease has become better known as infantile paralysis. During all this time Jessie has not failed to maintain her bright and sunny disposition and besides being able to write has crocheted a good deal. The constant and loving care of her mother through the years has in a large way helped to lighten the burden and the many friends of the young lady will hope for her a successful operation and a speedy recovery.

Country Cemetery Problems.

Many small towns where the cemetery is city owned, find themselves pressed for funds to maintain the local cemetery, and in a number of instances public-spirited citizens or organizations have taken charge of cemetery affairs to the betterment of the cemetery. The plan of Arcola, Ill., as reported in the local paper of that town, may offer suggestions to other communities, and monument dealers ought to be the first to interest themselves in the improvement of the local cemeteries.

The chamber of commerce has proposed to take over the management of the Arcola cemetery, with the idea of relieving the city of a financial burden and getting more accurate records of the burials.

Arcola, like many other small towns, finds its income from taxes insufficient to meet running expenses. The town has always had control of the cemetery but in the last few years has had difficulty in finding a competent man to hold the place of sexton because of the small salary offered. With changing officials, often records of the cemetery have been lost, misplaced or confused. There has been too much work for one man and the city has been depending upon owners of lots to keep the grass mowed. Some of them do and some do not, with the result that the grounds do not always have the well-kept appearance they should.

Many other small town cemeteries will no doubt find that present revenues fall short of meeting current expenses and maintaining the cemetery and civic organizations, women's clubs, improvement associations, monument dealers' local associations, and other bodies of wide-awake citizens can be of much assistance in raising funds for improving the local cemetery.—Monumental News.

The Return of the Immigrant.

Immigration into the United States is again assuming an impressive volume. Figures given by the department of labor show that an average of 5,000 immigrants are arriving daily at Ellis Island, a figure which, if maintained for a year, would bring in a record-making total of 1,800,000 newcomers to American shores. Even more significant is the fact that in the 12 months ending June 30, approximately 800,000 immigrants entered the United States. Transatlantic steamship companies report that all available steerage accommodations have been booked for nearly a year in advance. The tidal wave of immigration has arrived, and there is no reason to believe that immigration on a large scale will not continue for many years to come.

Conditions in contemporary Europe are of the kind which naturally favor the great tidal waves of immigration. The destruction of homes and property throughout great areas, vastly increased taxes, capped by an enormous increase in cost of living; the inevitable restlessness and discontent on the part of the millions who have gone through the thrill and excitement of war—all have combined to create a powerful impulse toward overseas immigration. Especially strong is this impulse to build new homes across the seas among the people of the central empires, and the newly created states of central and southeastern Europe. Difficulties of transportation, and the expense involved, however, are preventing the immigration of many hundreds of thousands who otherwise would choose to seek their fortunes in America. For every immigrant, indeed, who arrives at Ellis Island, stand across the Atlantic half a dozen others who would gladly take his place.

A continuation of the present wave of immigration—which is virtually certain—will do much to relieve the shortage of labor which prevails throughout America. Our industries and our farms are short many hundreds of thousands of workmen. The expansion of industry, and business enterprise generally, is severely handicapped by the scarcity of labor. A reasonable flow of immigration from the old world will solve, at least in part, one of the greatest problems with which American industry to-day is confronted. The immigrant of the better type is needed in America. There is plenty for him to do here, and the opportunities for him to advance and become a useful American citizen were probably never greater than they are to-day.

America has need of the immigrant. But in his coming he lays upon the American people grave and unescapable responsibilities. Those responsibilities must be cheerfully and promptly accepted if the balance sheet of immigrations is not to register a deficit. America, the "land of opportunity," owes to each of its prospective citizens a chance to learn the principles upon which the greatness of America has been built. Not to provide such a chance to everyone who knocks at our doors would be to give visible aid and comfort to the enemies within our own household.—Boston Transcript.

When They Talk Roofing Check Them by Certain-teed Standards

When anyone talks roofing to you, check them by these Certain-teed standards.

Are they weather-proof, fire-retarding and spark-proof? Certain-teed is.

How do they compare with Certain-teed in costs—to buy, to lay and to maintain? Certain-teed is usually lower.

Are they guaranteed by a reliable company, for five to fifteen years, according to weight? Certain-teed is.
